Chancellor Simpson Opens '58-'59 Session; Academic Year Begins With Convocation

Chancellor Grellet C. Simpson will officially recognize the opening of the 1958-59 academic year at a Chancellor's Convocation commencing with a full academic procession on Thursday, September 18 at 8 p.m. in George Washington Hall.

For the first time intermediate honors will be presented to five juniors who have maintained a 2.75 grade average for their first two years at Mary Washington. Dean Edward Alvey, Jr., will award the citations.

The opening address, given by Chancellor Simpson, will be "The Pursuit of Excellence." In recognizing academic merit at the first convocation of the school year, Dr. Simpson believes that such respect and notice of scholarship will act as a keynote for the 1958-59 session.

To be held annually, the Chancellor's Convocation will begin with a procession including the Chancellor, the Dean of the College, Marshall of the faculty, faculty members, administrative officers, seniors, class officials, and members of the senior class.

Dean of Students, Margaret Hargrove, will give the invocation. The Convocation was originated by the Committee on Public Occasions. Dr. E. Boyd Graves, chairman of the committee, stated that the purpose of the convocation is to "establish a tradition of academic awareness in the opening of the college year."

SGA Makes Additions And Changes In Rules

The Student Government Association of Mary Washington College recently published a list of the 1958-59 Student Handbook additions and changes.

The Handbook, formerly known as "the Bayonet" contains the rules and regulations of the College as well as the Honor Code, the College Calendar, names of officers of the various campus organizations and many other items of interest to students.

The Handbook was prepared under the editorship of Evelyn Breeden, Student Government President 1957-58, with the cooperation of the Student Council, the

College Expects New Students To Arrive On September 14; Orientation Schedule Complete

New Courses Are Offered At MWC In French, History

Dean Edward Alvey announced on Friday that several new courses including a survey of French literature, oriental history and a philosophy will be offered in the 1958-59 academic year.

Professor Enrique Luis Revol, visiting Fulbright lecturer from Argentina, will teach French 205-206, French Literature in English Translation. The course will survey the most significant works and movements in French literature from the Renaissance to the present with special reference to influences on English and American literature.

The first semester's work will emphasize French literature from the Renaissance to the Revolution; in the second semester, from the Revolution to the present. The course will not provide credit toward satisfaction of the language requirement for the major in French. It will be held two periods a week with two credits each semester.

Other Courses

Other courses taught by Professor Revol will be English 463-464, The Influence of Modern French Writers in English and North-American Literature, and Spanish 429-430, Contemporary Literature in Spanish-speaking Countries. The former will emphasize the influence of specific French literary movements (beginning with Baudelaire). The latter will evaluate critically the works of representative Hispano-American writers read in Spanish. English 463-464 will be held two periods a week for two credits a

Assembly on Monday to Begin Activities Class Registration Is Set for Tuesday

Over 600 new students are expected to arrive on campus Sunday, September 14, to begin the 1958-59 session of Mary Washington College. All new students and their families are to be guests of the College at a buffet luncheon scheduled for 12:30 on Sunday in Seacobeck Hall.

Telephone System Now Ready For Use On College Campus

Four months of preparation were climaxed when Mary Washington College's new telephone system was placed in operation over the Labor Day week-end.

The cutover, which took place officially on Tuesday, September 2, replaces some 45 separate phones which had been used by the College. Under the new system a dial-and-operator network of 135 phones and 165 extensions now provides telephone coverage for all dormitories as well as faculty and administrative offices. The new central number is ESsex 3-7250.

In announcing the change Mr. Edgar E. Woodward, Bursar, said that only the pay phones would remain outside the campus-wide network. Students will be able to receive incoming calls over phones located throughout all dormitories. Calls by students going outside the campus must be made through the pay phones.

The new network will allow office phones in the system to have two or more lines, plus intercommunication linkage on multiple extensions. Administrative phones can also get a direct outside line, by-passing the operator, by dialing "9".

The Office of the Bursar has

Other Sunday activities scheduled for new students include a group sing at 7:00 p.m. in the outdoor amphitheater and visits by counselors in the dormitories later in the evening. House meetings scheduled for 10:00 p.m. will climax the day.

Dr. R. W. Whidden, associate dean, announced that orientation activities will begin Monday morning with an assembly in George Washington Hall. Chancellor Simpson will greet the new students at the 9:00 a.m. meeting. Dean Edward Alvey, Jr., is also scheduled to discuss "College Ahead—A Forward Look at this Time."

Dean Whidden said that all incoming freshmen and transfer students had been mailed copies of the complete orientation schedule.

The morning assembly will be followed by meetings of students with faculty advisors during the remainder of the morning.

Language placement tests will follow luncheon. Individual conferences between students and advisors have been set from 2:00 until 4:30 p.m.

The first of several Handbook counseling sessions will begin at 5:00 p.m. A coke party sponsored by SGA, RA, and the YWCA in Monroe Hall will climax the day's schedule.

Registration Set

On Tuesday registration will run from 8:00 a.m. until 5 p.m. in Monroe. Reading tests in assigned

MWC Bullet Presents Three Seminar Programs

The first of three seminar programs sponsored by the editorial and business staffs of The Bullet has been scheduled for Monday evening, October 6, in Chandler Hall.

Margot Guest, editor, and Patsy Peterson, business manager, have announced that Chancellor Simpson is scheduled to discuss "The Bullet's responsibility to the College."

The seminars, held for the first time last year, are designed to acquaint old and new staff members with the policies of the campus newspaper. Although invitations have been extended to some 145 freshmen and transfer students who have been active in high school and college journalism, all other interested students are urged to attend also.

Present plans call for two additional meetings. Professional newspapermen will be invited to discuss various aspects of publishing at the future seminars.

Although no dates have been set for the final two meetings, Margot has announced that they would be held before the Christmas holiday.

New students attending the first seminar will be invited to participate in the publication of The Bullet.

TIME IS SHORT

At the beginning of the school year everyone usually, for the first few months, is aware of the presence of the new students. They are watched and commented upon by the upperclassmen and they are, in a sense, the center of attention.

However, when the bustle and excitement of the first weeks decline and the campus gradually settles into its familiar and established pattern of classes, C Shoppe breaks, studying, eating, playing bridge and sleeping, the underclassmen become aware of the seniors.

As for the seniors themselves, at the beginning of their fourth year they are only too aware of a newly acquired prestige upon the campus. For days and weeks, in fact, many have been reminding themselves that they ARE seniors. Every landmark is familiar to them. An occasional loose brick in a walk, short cuts, the price of sundaes, the tricky way a cigarette machine works, all are a part of their life on campus.

But most seniors are really startled to discover that they have only one year left in which to accomplish all they had set out to do as freshmen. There just doesn't seem to be enough time for courses they had meant to take, books they had wanted to read, or places they had intended to go. In fact, to many seniors it doesn't seem possible that four years past they were the freshmen who said to one another, "I'll never get to be a senior. Four years is such a long time."

But four years is not a long time, especially since college days are repeatedly said by many to rush by at a very swift clip. Therefore, it may seem imperative for freshmen, sophomores, juniors and seniors to take heed and beware the wings of Time. Do what you plan to do now and don't put it off until the next year, or you'll discover you won't have time then either.

AN OPEN LETTER TO FRESHMEN

So much advice has been given to young ladies who are planning to enter college that perhaps anything more that could be said is trite. The fact remains, however, that those hackneyed sayings ring of truth because the college years—those days of broadening horizons—are most important, and they should not be treated lightly. The four years that a girl spends at college provide more than just educational advancement. That in itself is quite a bit, but the social, physical, moral, and spiritual growth which is provided serves to make the college experience a full and well-rounded one.

One of the most important factors in getting the most out of the college education provided by one's parents is learning to do for yourself. The four years spent in dormitories with comparative strangers serve as an example of what life will offer when one is finally "on her own." Getting along with people is one of the college curriculum's most important courses. You may not register for it, but you certainly will profit by it. As in most phases of life, you will get out of dormitory life only what you put into it. Consideration, cooperation and an earnest desire to get along with those around you will reap many benefits. The change from high school life to college life is not so difficult that it can not be mastered. With willingness and interest, it is an exceptional girl who cannot gain from the human relations program which is offered by every college.

The college courses, the basic reason for attending college, are, too, an experience. They differ from high school, for the most part, in that you are expected to work for yourself. No more "spoon-feeding," a practice which is found in many high schools. There is, of course, opportunity for individualism, but this opportunity is given those who respond to the work with an adult approach. Remember, you are no longer high school adolescents. You are college women and you will be treated as such.

College life is never a grind—something useful can be gained every day. Use the time that will be spent here at Mary Washington College well. College experiences add a very important part to the sum total of life's achievements.

Welcome Freshmen!

VIEWS FROM THE HILL

(Question: What you expect to Gain from a College Education? asked of members of the freshman class.)

Primarily, I wish to go to college so that I may secure the kind of education that will enable me to embark on a career of my own choosing, and, at the same time, leave me better equipped to cope with life in general. I do not want my education to end here, for I have a great desire to develop my mind to the greatest extent possible in order that I may fully appreciate the many opportunities that the world has to offer.

Actually, I expect to gain a great deal out of college. While in school I want to major in a field that I can definitely use after graduation in a vocation of my own choosing. I expect to acquire a general knowledge and a better understanding of the people about me, to be able to think more for myself and not to depend upon others to make my decisions for me. Last, but by no means least, I hope to gain some very close friends, for I think that when girls live together they obtain a knowledge and understanding of one another that they would not otherwise have.

Carol Ann Spence
 West Millington, N. J.
 During the next four years, I expect to gain an ability to get along with others while accumulating knowledge necessary to make a living in a chosen field. I feel, also, that I shall be a more well-rounded person socially and shall have poise in the knowledge that I am able to do things properly.

London, Paris, Rome Are Major Cities In European Travel

By Carmen Cuipeper

After two years of wishful thinking, the dream finally materialized . . . a trip to Europe! Getting ready for the trip during exams and studying, too . . . our room in Westmoreland every day looked more and more like a mad-house.

Somehow I managed to get to New York the last day of exams without having forgotten something vital like the passport or travellers' cheques. We (a group from the University of Puerto Rico) arrived in London and all its fog after having been on a plane for fifteen hours. The whole week we were there it rained but it did not deprive us from seeing everything a tourist is expected to see. We even spent a day in Oxford where some of us missed our bus and got lost. Throughout the whole trip some of us were always getting lost or staying behind to look at shops.

One afternoon as we walked out of the wax museum (we had just come out of the Chamber of Horrors) we noticed that all the newspapers carried the same headline: "Murder at the Strand" (our ho-

Dr. Simpson Welcomes New Students for '57-'58

To The New Students:

This is a note of welcome to you from Mary Washington College—a very special note as far as I am concerned. It brings to you not only my official greeting as the Chancellor of the College, but also the personal and friendly good wishes of one who has a very sincere and genuine respect for young people.

Generally we think of respect as an attitude of young people toward their elders. I am, for the moment, reversing the conventional point of view in suggesting that all of us at the College have respect for the students, and therefore rightly look to you for help and counsel in planning the program of the College. What, then, is the basis for this respect and what obligations and responsibilities do you carry as a result of the College's attitude toward its students?

First of all, we are tremendously impressed by your vitality and sheer physical energies. We respect those who are alive, wide-awake, eager—both in body and mind. You will need the physical resources which you have been endowed with, for you will walk more than you have walked for years. It will be good for you. You will also work harder and longer than you have ever done before. It will be good for you. You will need to adjust your wishes and your desires to the customs and patterns of other people's lives. It will be good for you.

In the second place, we respect you because we know that you are the inheritors of our world—both the little world of college and the large world of the future.

In the third place, we respect you because you have wished, or willed, to seek education beyond the high school. At your request, as evidenced by your applications for admission, we at Mary Washington assume that you are sincerely interested in the serious and advanced study of the disciplines of thought which a liberal arts college seeks to instill in its students. We respect you for this decision, and we will work with you on the assumption that the chief purpose for your being here is the training and the more extensive development of your intellectual talents. If this proves not to be the case, then you will find yourself in an academically unfriendly atmosphere. You will be unhappy; we will be unhappy; and there will be no profit for you or for the College.

I am sure that you would not have undertaken to come to Mary Washington if you did not consider the experience as important as we here at the College feel that it is. You will be welcome, and we are delighted to have you as a student. The College respects you as a student and as a person, and if your purposes are valid in seeking an education, a mutual respect will be attained which will be to the benefit of both parties.

Sincerely,
 GRELLET C. SIMPSON
 Chancellor

MW College Delegates Attend National Student Congress In Ohio

The Eleventh National Student Congress convened August 20-29, 1958 at Ohio Wesleyan University, in Delaware, Ohio. Mary Washington's two delegates, Nancy Moncure and Carol Pridgen, joined about 1000 other students from over 300 colleges and universities in America to study the theme "Student Responsibility in an Age of Challenge."

Two of the outstanding speakers heard by the conference members were Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and Dr. Frank B. Graham, former Senator and President of the University of North Carolina.

In spite of a busy Congress schedule of plenary sessions, regional caucuses, workshops, and commission meetings, the delegates managed to find time for some fun too. Informal gatherings at some parties in the town hotel were late nightly events in which Congress-goers enthusiastically participated.

The Congress is an annual event established eleven years ago when NSA, the National Student Association, was founded. It is based on the concept of responsible and democratic representation of campus opinion and is dedicated to the development of student leadership in American higher education.

Every August students from all parts of the nation, with guests from other countries, meet together to exchange ideas, discuss pertinent issues, develop programs, and provide a voice for the American student community. Immediately preceding the Congress there is held the Student Body Presidents' Conference, designed to develop the understanding and skills necessary for the job of chief executive of a student governing group. Carol Pridgen, Mary Washington's Student Body President took part in this workshop conference with some 250 other student leaders.

The National Student Association is a confederation of some 400 U. S. college and university student governments, representing one million students. Mary Washington is a member of USNSA and of the Carolinas-Virginia Region of NSA. USNSA provides programs to aid student leaders and acts as the voice of American students. NSA also sponsors reasonably priced student tours to Europe.

Among those Mary Washington students who went on NSA tours this summer were Barbara Bache and Mary Massey. USNSA is the only student constituent member of the American Council on Education and is also closely associated with UNESCO and the National Education Association.

The coordinator of all NSA activities on the Mary Washington campus is Marianne (Fiddle) Graves. It is her job to implement NSA programs and projects at our college.

The above picture shows the progress being made at present on the new science building at Mary Washington College. Mr. Edgar Woodward, Bursar, states that he hopes the building will be ready for use by those students attending summer school at MWC; however, no definite plans have been made yet to this effect. Completion of the new structure is scheduled for sometime in March, 1959. All science courses, which were previously held in Chandler Hall, will be conducted in the science building upon its completion.

Dr. E. Boyd Graves, chairman of the Committee on Public Occasions at Mary Washington College has announced the schedule for the current Concert Series at MWC. There will be three concerts given in the series. The Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo will be presented November 20; John Gielgud will appear at the college December 15, and the Wagner Company's La Boheme is scheduled for February 9, 1959. No season tickets will be sold for the Concert Series this year. The performances will be given in George Washington Auditorium at 8:15 p.m.

Simpson Announces Faculty Promotions

Promotions of members of the faculty of Mary Washington College for the 1958-59 session have been announced by Chancellor Greillet C. Simpson.

Mrs. Mildred M. Bolling, associate professor and chairman of the French department has been promoted to full professor and chairman of the newly created department of modern foreign languages.

Other promotions voted by the Board of Visitors of the University of Virginia at its Charlottesville meeting included those of Miss Margery E. Arnold as associate professor of health, physical education and recreation, and Dr. Stanley F. Bulley as associate professor of music; and, as assistant professors, Miss Mildred Cates in home economics, Sidney H. Mitchell in English, and Dr. Mary Jo Parrish and W. J. Pitman in biology.

Epaulet Editor Receives Creative Writing Award

Betty Desmond, a senior from Lynchburg and editor of the Epaulet, won second place in the short-story section of the creative writing contest sponsored by the Virginia Division of the American Association of University Women and the Virginia Highlands Festival.

She received a certificate award at the Festival held in Abington in August, 1958. Her entry, entitled "The Sickness" will be published in the fall issue of the Epaulet.

Pridgen Asks Freshmen To Become Active Part Of Student Government

Dear New Student:

The Student Government Association is that organization through which you participate in your own self-government. It represents you to the faculty, administration, and town. It acts as your spokesman in the educational community, making your viewpoint known on campus issues. Through the democratic organization of student government, leadership is developed and given expression.

Student government is responsible for the major concerns of students and is constantly looking out for student welfare. It attempts to aid students in their growth toward maturity by giving them freedoms and placing upon them responsibilities. Through SGA, student-elected Leaders make those rules and regulations necessary for the good of the whole community, help enforce rules, and administer justice in the case of rule infractions.

Much of the work of the Student Government Association is delegated to the Student Council, your elected campus leaders. You, as an individual, are represented four ways on this council: the residential view is given by your House President, the class view by your class SGA representative, the organizational view by the presidents of the major all-campus organizations, and the overall student view by the executive officers. These four groups comprising Student Council meet every Monday night in the SGA Room on the second floor of Ann Carter Lee to act as your voice and leaders.

Important Role

Although much work of SGA is done by this council, you play a most important role in your self-government. Through your attendance at the monthly student body meetings and your participation in student government programs, you aid your SGA. By voting intelligently in campus elections and fulfilling the duties of a responsible campus citizen, you insure the success of your student government. In bringing your opinions to one of your four representatives on Student Council, you enable action to be taken through the proper and effective channels. Through critical participation in student

Reeder Says Honor Is Integral Force

Dear New Student:

This summer each of you received a letter about Mary Washington's Honor Code.

When you entered your room you found a printed plaque on your bureau explaining the Honor System.

By this time you have read the section on Honor in your Handbook.

The reason we have brought the Honor System to your attention so early in your college career is that we feel a common understanding of ethics, both academic and social, play an important part in the life of each college student.

In any type of community, certain rules or standards are set to which all those living in that particular society are expected to adhere. At Mary Washington we have chosen to live by the highest of all possible standards — one based on personal honor.

Honor Code

Honor is nothing new to you. You have known the difference between right and wrong since early childhood. You probably have your own personal honor code already. Some of you may even have had an Honor System in your high school.

An Honor System is not merely a set of rules. It is a way of life in which all those living in a specific community agree to be honest with each other at all times and to report any violation of this code. Your signing of the Honor Pledge card will be your formal acceptance of this standard.

Program Begins

On Wednesday, September 17, the Honor Committee and approximately 50 specially chosen students will begin their program of counseling all Freshmen and

Psy. Dept. Offers Course In Reading

Reading Time Is Cut

The psychology department has announced that the Harvard Reading Course, listed in the catalogue as Psychology 100, Reading and Study Aids, will be offered in 1958 because of strong student interest shown in the past year.

The course, which will be opened to all students, will afford those who are slow readers the opportunity to increase their reading speed from the level of 200 words per minute to an average of 500 words per minute.

Students with lower reading speeds and lower comprehension will be given priority. The average student who finishes the course with an increase in reading speed suffers no loss in comprehension. In everyday terms this means that students can do what formerly amounted to five hours of reading in two hours.

In order to accommodate students there will be two sections, and the time will be arranged in both cases, Mr. J. T. Pauls, assistant professor of psychology, who will teach the course stated that "although the course will be directed mainly toward freshmen, upperclassmen who couldn't schedule the course previously will be admitted."

13 Degrees Awarded Requirements Filled

Thirteen seniors completed degree requirements August 8, 1958 and will be awarded degrees from Mary Washington College on June 1, 1959.

The following students are eligible for B.A. degrees: Miss Florence Helen Barden, Bethesda, Md., a major in Economics and Business Administration; Mrs. Lucile Hansford Brooks, of Fredericksburg, a psychology major; Miss Ailwida Maria Domenech, an English major from San Juan, Puerto Rico; Mrs. Eileen Brinlinger Mulcahy, Peekskill, New York, a sociology major; Miss Jo McNeely, a music major from Ashburn, Virginia; Miss Lydia Duane Massey, Saluda, Virginia, a major in psychology; Mrs. Faith Germain Nelson, of Middletown, New York, also a psychology major; Miss Carol Ann Noakes, an economics and business administration major from Douglaston, New York; Miss Ann Carolyn Rollins, of Fredericksburg, a major in History and Mrs. Mary Louis McNiel Stuart, an art major from Richmond, Virginia.

Those who will receive B.S. degrees are Miss Mollie C. Bradshaw, chemistry major from Leesburg, Virginia; Miss Nancy Gotthardt of Dunn Loring, Virginia, a major in Home Economics, and Mrs. Janice Buck White, a chemistry major from Aldie, Virginia.

Registration Is An Experience In Day In Life Of Freshman

You can pretend you don't hear the clock radio when it starts at seven o'clock but at 7:05 when the buzzer sounds, you don't even try to pretend. You get out of bed and turn it off.

Your roommate wants to start early this morning because it is registration day. The schedule is set up in alphabetical order and her last name starts with "B".

You wish the buzzer weren't so loud and that you could go back to sleep. Your name starts with "Y" and you can't register until after lunch.

But here you are, stumbling about in the early morning, squirting a tube of shampoo on your toothbrush and wishing that your roommate was named Zilch.

After a hurried breakfast and a fast trip to the Post Office, your "roomie" goes over to register and you go back to the room to wish you could go back to sleep.

When you get back from lunch, you begin to worry a little about your roommate. She has been registering since nine o'clock this morning and she still hasn't come back. What, you wonder, is happening over in Monroe?

Finally you can't wait any longer; it is time for the "Y's" to register.

On the way downstairs you pass your roommate. She looks haggard but triumphant.

"No Saturday classes!" she yells as you rush by.

Inside Monroe you find a line of girls even longer than the breakfast line in the dining hall. Someone thrusts a sheaf of papers into your hand.

"Fill these out please. When you finish, put this one in that pile and then make six copies of those little ones."

You finally get all the papers filled out and off you go to register. With the help of your faculty advisor, you already have a tentative schedule filled out so you aren't too worried.

You have no trouble getting into the English class you wanted and you fit into a 10 o'clock Music Survey class. You are forced to alter your plans slightly when you find that the only History class not yet filled meets at 8:30 in the morning. That isn't too bad so you sign up.

You check the schedule and find that the class meets on Saturday.

Two hours later you sit on the front steps, exhausted. Your beanies is askew and your once-white tennis shoes are covered with other people's footprints. You clutch a smeary schedule card in your hand and rejoice.

You don't care about having an 8:30 class every morning. You don't care that you have a gym class in the middle of the afternoon three times a week. You don't even mind having a two-hour lab at 10:30 on Saturday morning. You have registered! You are through! And you still have ALL Tuesday afternoon free!

Placement Testing Set For This Week

All incoming freshmen and transfers are to take language placement examinations if they plan to take second or third year French or Spanish. These examinations are to be given at 1:45 p.m. on Monday, September 15, in duPont Hall. Students taking the French placement examinations are to report to the second floor, and those taking the Spanish examination to the first floor.

Recalling Names Is Hard for Frosh

Names, names, names — for a freshman, the first few days and weeks of college are all but lost in a muddle of names.

There are the names of your roommates, the names of the girls across the hall, your big sister, her roommates, the name of your hall counselor and dozens of other people.

After a while, you begin to remember the names. The real difficulty comes when you try to match the names with people or offices.

By November, you usually know who the class presidents are, who the house presidents are, and who your suitmates are. You have a fair idea of who the major campus leaders are.

Among the first of these leaders to speak to you will be Carol Pridgen, president of the Student Government. Dodie Reeder, Honor Council president, will be one of the first to welcome you, too.

Mary Massey, who heads the Inter Club Association, Laura Baker, who leads the YWCA, and Barbara Badhe, who heads the Recreation Association, helped plan the activities for your first few days on the hill. You will meet them at the welcome party and at most of the other programs.

If you live in Willard, your house president is Rose Bennet. Alice Joyce Dix is president of Virginia Dorm. Presidents of the off campus dorms are Nancy Mann in Cornell, Carol Faison in Betty Lewis, and Paula Williams in Trench Hill.

Once you have memorized the names and offices of these student leaders, you can concentrate on the names that match the girls in your dorm, at your table in Seaco-beck, and in your classes.

Maybe by Christmas you will know them all!

Switchboard Is Successful At MWC

just completed a temporary directory listing all extensions in the system. Thus, every student will be assigned an extension number for the phone located nearest her dormitory room.

Network Center

Nerve center for the network is in the basement of George Washington Hall where two rooms have been closed off on the north end of the Hall of Mirrors.

One room is filled with minutely wired metal frame cables and electrical relays for the unit, called a "701 private branch exchange."

The other will serve as the switchboard center where operators will be on duty from 7 a.m. until 1 a.m.

Mr. Woodward said present plans call for two trunk lines connected with the Hugh Mercer infirmary to handle all after midnight calls. Attendants are on duty there during the hours when the regular switchboard operators are off.

Since the system was installed while students were on vacation there is no precedent for estimating the number of calls the College will receive during various hours of the day. Mr. Woodward said that at present six operators are manning the switchboard 17 hours a day, seven days a week. If it becomes necessary, Mr. Woodward said, the central board will be manned 24 hours. "We need time to experiment," he continued.

Installed by the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company, the new system will channel all incoming calls through the switchboard where they will be transferred to the appropriate destination. All inter-college calls may be dialed directly and bypass the central operator. Phones for incoming and campus calls only will be marked by an "R" on the dial.

MWC Graduates of 1958 Continue Study; Several Members to Gain Scholarships

The following Mary Washington graduates of the class of 1958 are now doing graduate work: Joyce Lee Smith at the Medical College of Virginia; Barbara Morris at Drexell Institute of Technology; Eminent Villanueva, study in physical therapy at Duke University; Mary Ann Moyer, work in biology at Lehigh University, and Charlotte Walker, student in sacred music at Louisville Southern Baptist Theological Seminary.

Several members of the 1958 graduating class have been awarded scholarships for further study. They are Alice Mason, given a fellowship at Emory University for work in basic health science; June Kyzer, granted a graduate assistantship in English at Purdue University; Mary Louise Morris, a graduate assistantship in French at the University of Kansas; Bonnie Hatch, a $1,000 graduate scholarship; Marcia Boyles, a $1,600 teaching fellowship in zoology at Ohio University; Beverly Cooke, the Roanoke Family Service Association Scholarship for two years' study at R.P.I. in social work. Molly Bradshaw, who completed requirements for MWC degree in August, 1958, was offered three graduate scholarships. She accepted a $1,350 assistantship in biology plus tuition at the University.

Mrs. Anne dePorry McGrath, also of the class of 1958, won the $100 prize offered by the Virginia Society of Colonial Dames for the best essay in the field of Colonial history by a student of a Virginia college or university in 1958. McGrath was an English major at Mary Washington.

'Y' Big Sisters Assigned Help Frosh During Year

In the absence of Carolyn Crum, Social Service Chairman of YWCA, from the campus during the summer, Joanne Campbell has taken on the responsibility of assigning big sisters who, it is hoped, will be helpful and friendly to their little sisters not only as school starts but through the whole year.

A new method was used in assigning big sisters this summer. One older girl, carefully selected by her own voluntary offers of what she was willing to do for her new students and by the most careful judgment of the committee working with Jody, is assigned to a whole room of freshmen. It is thought that this will help to limit the difficulty an older girl has in trying to visit all of her little sisters. Effort was made to assign new students to a big sister who would have something in common with them. Obviously, because in most cases transfers are not placed together in any one room, transfer students had to be assigned individually to a big sister.

Enrique Luis Revol, professor of comparative literature at the National University of Cordoba in Cordoba, Argentina, has been given a year's leave of absence and will be a foreign exchange professor under the Fulbright Act at Mary Washington College for the 1958-59 session.

As visiting Fulbright lecturer, Mr. Revol will give courses in French literature in English translation, the influence of modern French writers in English and North American literature, and contemporary literature in Spanish-speaking countries. An author as well as lecturer, Mr. Revol has been a research fellow at Harvard University, a translator at the United Nations, and professor of social anthropology at the University of Puerto Rico.

Julian Binford, who has been on a year's leave of absence, will return as professor of art.

Miss Anna Mae Harris, who has been on the faculty of North Carolina State College, will teach mathematics. Miss Harris is a Mary Washington graduate and received her M.A. from the University of Virginia.

Other Appointments

Chancellor Grellet C. Simpson also announced the appointment of Mr. Joseph Apohyan, born in Beirut, Lebanon, as assistant professor in psychology. Mr. Apohyan came to the United States as a permanent resident to obtain a higher education. He has a B.A. from Southern Methodist University and has completed requirements for a Ph.D. at Columbia University's Teachers' College.

It was also announced that Miss Alice Healy will be the new circulation manager in E. Lee Trinkle Library. Miss Healy received her B.A. from Rockford College, and her M.A. from the University of Wisconsin. She will assume the position in October.

Other new members to the faculty just announced are: Charles A. Stettin, B.A., M.A., University of Virginia, and Ph.D. Harvard University where he has been a teaching fellow. He has been appointed assistant professor of sociology at Mary Washington College. Mrs. Lydia Boyce Pauls, B.S. and M.S. Florida State University, will join the psychology department as instructor.

rooms will be given from 2:00 until 5:00 p.m. Cap and Gown, senior honorary group, will present a special college traditions assembly at 7:00 p.m. in George Washington, and Handbook counseling will continue in the individual dorms following the assembly.

The SGA and Honor Council will jointly sponsor an assembly in George Washington Wednesday morning. The theme of the 9:30 convocation is "Freedom and Responsibility." The third Handbook session has been scheduled for 5:00 p.m.

Wednesday afternoon has been set aside for sports activities sponsored by the Recreation Association.

Students will have an opportunity to meet local church leaders Thursday evening during a program in George Washington Auditorium. This program has been designated, "Your Religious Leaders—Campus and Community."

Classes Begin

Classes will begin on Thursday for over 1500 students. A formal convocation for all students has been scheduled for 8:00 p.m. in George Washington. All members of the faculty and administration as well as members of the senior class will march in an academic procession.

Friday's activities will be highlighted by a student panel at 7:00 p.m. in George Washington. The group will discuss, "Your College Life Is What You Make It."

On Saturday the annual Big-Little Sister picnic supper has been scheduled for 5:00 p.m. followed by a square dance in Ann Carter Lee. Big-Little Sister Church Day will be observed in churches Sunday morning.

Chancellor and Mrs. Simpson will be hosts at a garden party for all new students and faculty at Brompton from 4:00 until 5:30 Sunday afternoon.

Second week activities include the SGA Handbook test on Monday and the conclusion of Honor Code training on Tuesday.

All students will observe Loyalty Night, which will be held in the George Washington Auditorium at 7:00 p.m. Wednesday.

The YWCA will sponsor the Penny Carnival Friday at 7:00 p.m. in Monroe. Activities for the week will be concluded by an informal dance Saturday night in Ann Carter Lee, the Gothic Room.

The freshman orientation assembly will be held Monday in George Washington. The climax of orientation will come Tuesday evening in the Amphitheater with the annual Pep Rally.

Have you seen this orientation schedule?

week; Spanish 429-430, meeting three periods a week, will carry three credits each semester.

The Chemistry Department will offer one new course; the History department will offer two advanced courses. The Modern Language department will give one new course in Italian, and five advanced courses in French.

New Program

Physical Education 151, Freshman Physical Activities, which is a completely new program, will be given by the Physical Education staff. Psychology 421, History of Psychology taught by Mr. Hodge, and Spanish 327, Advanced Composition and Conversation, given by Miss Rivera will also be among new additions to the curriculum for 1958-59.

The college has also granted permission for students to take flying instruction under arrangement with the Shannon School of Aeronautics, Inc., provided permission is obtained from parents. A copy must be on file both in Dean Alvey's office and in the office of Shannon School. Transportation to and from the school is provided free.

The Ground School course is offered on a basis of 30 hours for 15 weeks, including the necessary text book material, for a total cost of $20.00. The training is approved by the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

Dr. Alfred Lantz has announced that chorus try-outs will be held on Thursday, September 18 from 3-5 p.m. and on Friday, September 19 from 2-4:30 in the choral rehearsal room in Pollard 140.

Henry and Mrs. Gladys Reed. Mrs. Henry, formerly in Randolph, is now the assistant head resident, in one of the larger dormitories at the University of Wisconsin in Madison.

Mrs. Reed will assume new duties in September as head resident of Strong Hall at George Washington University in Washington, D. C.

Head Residents Named for Session

Two new head residents have been appointed to dormitories for the 1958-59 session at Mary Washington. They are Mrs. K. J. Beebe, head of Kansas City, Missouri, and Mrs. James N. Wood, Sr., of Scottsville, Virginia.

Mrs. Beebe will serve as assistant head resident in Willard Hall with Mrs. Garner. She is a graduate of Ohio State University and served as head resident at William and Mary for one year.

Mrs. James N. Wood, Sr., will be a new alternate head resident, residing in Virginia Hall. Mrs. Wood was curator at the James Monroe Law Office Shrine in Fredericksburg for two years. She has also been active in the work of St. George's Parish.

The new head residents were appointed to succeed Mrs. Nellie

CLOTHESLINE

Empire Look, Trapeze Are High Fashion Fall Colors Are Ablaze in Gold, Russet

By Sara Prosterman

Welcome to our own miniature fashion world on the "hill." In the style line on our campus I'd like to push you on, not as a follower in this exciting season, but as a leader, to strike out on the fashion limb, be a little different, and to wear the "latest." This fall there is a complete and revolutionary fashion change, so revolt!

For this season comes a whole flock of beautiful new relaxed shapes. "Shapes," mind you; because while relaxed, they're now also shapely, feminine, flattering. The chemise is still in, and we've gotten accustomed to that "sack" look. We might as well get used to the trapeze for it's flying high this year in the circus style. The empire (Pronounced as the French would say it, line calls for emphasis right under the bust and is very important in the "shape" field. In many suits and two piece dresses we find the trapeze and chemise combination.

Making news is also the shorter skirt and you'll find the popular dress manufacturers are hiding their hemlines. The skirt is no longer measured from the floor, but the knee now determines length. Skirts this year should be between 1 1/2 to 3 inches below the knee depending on your height and leg shape.

Shorter Hemlines

Sportswear has seen a change too. The sweaters are longer and looser. Fabrics are more exciting, and incidentally one of the most popular new fabrics is mohair. Blouses are out. Oh, you'll still be wearing blouses, but the blouse this season is worn out of the skirt. Prints are the most gorgeous ever.

The after-dark scene is darily different. You will want to be a conversation piece at dances. There's exciting variety in silhouette-skirts that are "bubble", puffs, melons, harems. Back interest is marvelous. The high waistline is everywhere—and in the opposite direction, long-torso silhouettes break out in a ripple of flounces at the knee or hemline.

One of the prettiest details of this '58 season is the bow. You'll see it on coats, suits, dresses, separates, and hats. Fur will be a big trim also. Fur will go on everything.

Color almost tops the fashion news and it is very beautiful. "Autumn Woods" colors blaze throughout the fall styles. There's a green of gold, russet, pumpkin, blue, red, and bright blues. These colors show up in solids and are doubly exciting in mixtures.

This certainly appears to be one of fashion's best seasons in fashion's best year. Your old things are very old and the new, completely new and revolutionary.

Painting Awarded Guenther Gets Ph.D

Norman Rubington, whose painting "North African Village" was given to MWC by the Class of 1958, was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship in Art for 1958 last May.

Loula C. Guenther, registrar at Mary Washington College since 1943, was awarded a Ph.D. degree at the University of Pittsburgh on June 11. His dissertation was an evaluation of the functions performed by registrars in 271 degree-granting institutions as accredited by the North Central Association. A graduate of Southwestern College (Kansas), Dr. Guenther has an M.A. from the University of Pittsburgh.

Three Hong Kong Girls Will Be Studying Here

Among the new students at Mary Washington College this fall are three from Hong Kong, a British crown colony in southeast China. Lucy and Sylvia Wu are daughters of a textile merchant there. The former attended St. Mary's School in Hong Kong and graduated this year from Pine Manor Junior College in Wellesley, Mass. The latter graduated recently from the Diocesan Girls' School in her homeland. Her brother, David, is currently enrolled at Harvard University.

Lucy will be classified as a member of the junior class. Her sister Sylvia is a member of the entering freshman class.

Miss Janet Ping is the daughter of a Hong Kong journalist. A graduate at Heep Yunn school, she was a student at summer school here.

STUDENTS APPOINTED

Vaughan Hargroves and Dorothy Zirkle have been appointed to the Faculty Public Occasions Committee.

HI, I'M YER NEW ROOMMATE.

First Freshman Assembly held Monday, September 15.

Hitchcock To Speak To MWC Faculty

Arthur A. Hitchcock will speak on "Counselling Freshman" at a meeting of faculty advisors to be held Sunday, September 14, at seven p.m. in Du Pont Little Theatre.

Dr. Hitchcock received his A.B. at Wesleyan, Ed.M. at Harvard, and his Ph.D. at Yale. He served as Assistant Director of the Guidance Center at Harvard from 1946 to 1949; he was Director of the Junior Division and Counselling Service at Nebraska from 1949-55.

Dr. Hitchcock is interested in the college students' motivation and "inter-disciplinary approach in guidance and psychology." He is the author of a monograph entitled "Administrative Problems in College and University Counselling Facilities of the Future."

The Post Office has requested the following students:

Please do not use nicknames in addressing mail.

Please use correct College Station Box number.

Please have upperclassman instruct new students how to use P. O. Box combination.

tel). It was with a mixture of anticipation and apprehension that we walked back to the hotel. When we arrived Scotland Yard had already invaded the place. It was to "forget" the murder that some of us went dancing that night.

From London to Paris

From London we went to Paris. Needless to say, everyone was excited about the week we were to spend in that beautiful city. The first night we were there we went to the Moulin Rouge to get an early taste of Parisian night-life.

We took a walk through the Champs-Elysees, stopping off in different side-walk cafes to rest, talk, and have something to drink. One night we went to the "Lido" to see its famous show; next night to the Folies Bergere to compare the two shows. For a change of atmosphere we visited the so-called "caves" on the Left Bank for some fine jazz. Then we got up in the morning completely exhausted to hear a lecture on the present situation of France or a visit to such "cultural" spots as museums, churches, etc. Then later in the day we took a look at the city from atop the Eiffel Tower. We had a hard time trying not to get in the way of bicycles, trying to remember that now we were dealing with francs and not with English money.

The day before we left for Spain we had a champagne party in our hotel.

Rome, Ruins and Sacks

Then we spent a week in Rome and all its ruins. . . Never in my life had I seen so many sack clothes. Result: in order to feel at home, I had to buy some. The group had dinner at "Alfredo's" and after that a nightclub. . . We all went over to the Fountain of Trevi almost every day to throw a few coins and be sure to return someday. We drank six or seven cups of strong "cafe espresso" to keep awake in the museums. . . loading cameras. . . borrowing someone's light meter. . . explaining to a friend how you want your picture taken. . . always checking to make sure you still have your passport.

Shopping in Italy

In Florence we invaded the Ponte Vecchio to go shopping. A trip to Sienna one Sunday where nine of us slipped out of the Cathedral, rented a jalopy and rode all over the hilly town singing and laughing. Everywhere we went we were sure to hear the march of "The Bridge Over The River Kwai", and that popular Italian song, "Volare". The best interpretation of the latter, I heard in a cafe in Florence where the singer tried to imitate Elvis Presley.

By the time we left Florence we were beginning to look more like zombies than like human beings—the reason behind it being too much night-life and not enough sleep.

When we got off the train in Venice our suitcases were loaded in the gondolas with us. In the Grand Canal every time a speed boat would pass us, our gondola would almost tip over.

It was in St. Mark's Square that I noticed the great varieties that have developed from the "sack" and the "trapeze". It seemed as if every woman in the Square was trying to outdo the other in wearing the latest clothes.

Dreams Shattered

Our romantic dreams of the Venetian canals were shattered one night as we saw one or two rats swimming (what a surprise that was!) beside our gondola, jumping onto the steps of a house and scurrying in through the rotten wood door.

Getting up in the morning was the hardest thing of all; my roommate and I almost didn't make it the day we left for Cortina.

In Munich we had a wonderful time going to the beer gardens and to some dark cafes in Swabing where all the Existentialists and a few bums are supposed to congregate.

Brussels and the Fair

During our trip I had no idea what the world situation was—sometimes I even feared that the Third World War might have started and that I knew nothing about it.

After three days in Munich we left for Brussels where we spent a rainy day at the Fair. By this time we were financially destitute, so very exhausted from all the traveling that everyone was glad to get to New York—to its modern conveniences, the American dollar, the hamburgers, and the ice-cold Coca-Colas. The trip was only an appetizer—one has to return someday.

George Steiner To Give Violin and Viola Lessons, Available to All Students

The Music Department has announced that Mr. George Steiner, Assistant Concertmaster of the National Symphony Orchestra in Washington, D. C. will give lessons in violin and viola this year.

Lessons are available to all students, regardless of whether they are music majors. The time for the lessons will be arranged. Those students who are interested should see Mr. Luntz during or following registration on Tuesday or Wednesday.

Dean Edward Alvey, Jr. discussed the "Honor System as an Ideal" at the conference on Friday, September 12. The remainder of the meeting consisted of discussions, speeches and several panels. A picnic was held on Friday for all members.

Students attending the conference included the members of Student Council, freshman counselors, Formal Dance Chairman, Safety Chairman, presidents of Y.W.C.A., R. A., and I. C. A., and editors of publications. Other members attending were vice-presidents of the sophomore, junior, and senior classes, day student president, small dorm presidents, and members of the Honor Committee.

Handbook Revisions

Joint Council, and the Office of the Dean of Students.

Foremost among the changes made by the committee is permission for students to smoke in Seabrook at dinner. Bermuda shorts may be worn in Ann Carter Lee between 2:00 and 5:30 p.m. on weekdays.

Students other than freshmen may entertain overnight guests in dormitories on Friday and Saturday nights. Arrangements are to be made at least 24 hours in advance with the Head Resident.

Another revision of special interest to new students enables Freshmen to take 9 overnights away from the campus during the first semester. This restriction, which does not apply to trips away from town for the day, is removed during the second semester only if the student has a "C" average or above, with no failures, in the academic work.
